Objectives: Upon completion of this activity, the participants should be able to:

- Examine the etiology and management of fetal growth restriction
- Compare and contrast symmetric and asymmetric growth in small-for-gestational age (SGA) infants
- Describe common physical characteristics, problems and management of the SGA infant
- Discuss the role of Doppler evaluation in the monitoring and management of fetal growth restriction
- Characterize postnatal growth and neurodevelopment outcomes of SGA infants
- Recognize the role of the multidisciplinary team for the short and long term care of the fetal patient with growth restriction and the postnatal implications of the prenatal diagnosis
