Objectives: Upon completion of this activity, the participants should be able to:

- Discuss the role of human milk in supporting the preterm infant's immature immune system and its impact on both short- and long-term health outcomes
- Describe the clinical application of neuromuscular electrical stimulation (NMES) in the management of preterm dysphagia, including indications and safety considerations
- Analyze EBP and QI data on NMES-supported feeding and its impact on discharge timing and human milk use
- Apply an interprofessional approach to improve NICU feeding outcomes and increase human milk utilization

Target Audience: This interprofessional activity is designed for physicians and nurses. We also invite allied health professionals to attend.

Format: Didactic lecture with question and answer session

Accreditation:

In support of improving patient care, Texas Health Resources is jointly accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME), the Accreditation Council for Pharmacy Education (ACPE), and the American Nurses Credentialing Center (ANCC), to provide continuing education for the healthcare team.
